As a young boy, he sang in the choir of the Salzburg Cathedral, his voice soaring amidst the hallowed halls, filling them with angelic harmonies. This early exposure to sacred music left an indelible mark on his soul, igniting a spiritual flame that would forever burn within him.

Mozart's autoharp compositions were not mere transcriptions of sacred hymns; they were profound interpretations, imbued with his own unique musical genius. He infused the familiar melodies with intricate variations, adding embellishments and countermelodies that danced and twirled around the original themes, creating a breathtaking tapestry of sound.
