The EU's History and Structure

The EU was founded in 1951 with the signing of the Treaty of Rome. The treaty created the European Coal and Steel Community, which was the forerunner to the EU. The goal of the community was to pool the coal and steel resources of six European countries (Belgium, France, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, and West Germany) in order to prevent future wars.

Over the years, the EU has grown to include 27 member countries. The EU's institutions include the European Parliament, the Council of the European Union, the European Commission, and the Court of Justice of the European Union. The European Parliament is the only directly elected body of the EU. The Council of the European Union is made up of representatives from the governments of the member states. The European Commission is the executive body of the EU. The Court of Justice of the European Union is the highest court in the EU.

The EU's Policies and Actions

The EU has a wide range of policies and actions that affect the global stage. These include:

- Trade: The EU is one of the world's largest trading blocs. The EU's trade policies affect the global economy by setting tariffs and other trade barriers.
- Economic development: The EU provides financial and technical assistance to developing countries. The EU's development policies help to promote economic growth and reduce poverty.
- Human rights: The EU is a strong advocate for human rights. The EU's human rights policies help to promote democracy and protect human rights around the world.
