

The Pig Who Wanted to Laugh

Once upon a time, there was a pig named Percy who wanted to laugh. He was a very serious pig, and he never seemed to find anything funny. The other animals on the farm made fun of him, and they called him "the pig who never laughs." But Percy didn't care. He was determined to find something that would make him laugh.

One day, Percy was walking through the forest when he came across a group of monkeys. The monkeys were playing and laughing, and Percy stopped to watch them. He had never seen anything so funny, and he started to laugh too. The monkeys were surprised to see Percy laughing, and they asked him why he was so happy.

"I'm laughing because you're so funny," said Percy. "I've never seen anything so silly."

The monkeys were delighted to hear Percy laughing, and they invited him to play with them. Percy had a lot of fun playing with the monkeys, and he laughed until his sides hurt.

After a while, it was time for Percy to go home. He said goodbye to the monkeys, and he thanked them for making him laugh. As he walked home, Percy thought about all the fun he had had. He realized that laughter was a wonderful thing, and he was glad that he had finally found something that made him happy.

When Percy got home, he told the other animals about the monkeys. He told them how funny they were, and how much fun he had playing with them. The other animals were surprised to hear Percy talking about laughter. They had never seen him so happy before.
