Key Concepts

Feminism Feminist peace research is grounded in the belief that gender inequality and violence are root causes of conflict and war. Feminists argue that women's experiences and perspectives are essential for understanding and addressing the causes of conflict and for building sustainable peace.

Intersectionality Feminist peace research recognizes that gender intersects with other forms of oppression, such as race, class, and sexuality. This intersectionality means that women experience conflict and violence differently depending on their position in society.

Decolonization Feminist peace research also emphasizes the importance of decolonization, challenging the legacy of colonialism and imperialism that has shaped global power relations and contributed to conflict and violence.

Peacebuilding Feminist peace research focuses not only on conflict prevention and resolution but also on peacebuilding. This includes efforts to create more just and equitable societies that are free from violence and oppression.
