Successes

1. Andrew Jackson: Jackson, the seventh president of the United States, is often considered the father of American populism. He appealed to the common man by attacking the "corrupt bargain" that had elected John Quincy Adams in 1824. Jackson's presidency was marked by a series of reforms, including the establishment of the spoils system and the independence of the Treasury from the Bank of the United States. He also expanded suffrage and signed into law the Indian Removal Act.

2. Abraham Lincoln: Lincoln is best known for his leadership during the American Civil War, but he was also a consummate populist. He rose from humble beginnings and appealed to the common people with his message of equality and opportunity. Lincoln's presidency saw the abolition of slavery, the passage of the Homestead Act, and the establishment of the transcontinental railroad.
3. Franklin D. Roosevelt: FDR led the United States through the Great Depression and World War II. He was a master at connecting with the common people, and his New Deal programs helped to alleviate the effects of the Depression. Roosevelt also expanded social security and workers' rights.

Failures

1. William Jennings Bryan: Bryan was a three-time presidential candidate who never won the office. He was a charismatic orator who appealed to populist sentiments, but his policies were often unrealistic. Bryan's support for the silver standard led to the Panic of 1893, and his opposition to American imperialism led to the Spanish-American War.
2. Huey Long: Long was a controversial Louisiana governor who was assassinated in 1935. He was a populist who appealed to the poor and working class, but his policies were often authoritarian and corrupt. Long's "Share Our Wealth" program promised to redistribute income, but it was never implemented.
3. Donald Trump: Trump was the 45th president of the United States. He ran as a populist outsider, promising to "Make America Great Again." However, his presidency was marked by division and controversy. Trump's policies, such as the Muslim travel ban and the withdrawal from the Paris Climate Agreement, were unpopular with many Americans.

Populist presidents have had a significant impact on American history, both good and bad. While some have championed the common people and enacted meaningful reforms, others have led to division and even disaster. It is important to remember that populism is not a monolithic ideology. There are many different types of populism, and its effects can vary depending on the context in which it emerges.
